Dear Sir:

I have serious reservations over the scrupulous adherence to reporting requirements on the part of Representative Tami Green (28th District). Here is why:

1. Her 2006 campaign fails to report in a timely fashion;

No reporting of contributions occurred in 2005, yet contributions totaling $13,538 from as far back as September 30, 2005 (Eli Lily - $575) through the cutoff in December 2005 were received into the campaign yet not reported via C-3 or C-4 until March 2006. And all the while these contributions arrived without a declaration of candidacy (C-1) which was not filed until March 2006. This does not appear to represent a computer glitch or change in Treasurer, but rather neglect on the part of an experienced candidate.

2. Campaign expenditures or contributions or both are unaccounted for.

I do not suggest criminal activity, but rather a failure to report either contributions or loans totaling $11,640.49. In her last 2004 C-4, dated March 2005, Representative Green reported that she had, during the whole of the 2004 Campaign, collected $109,247.41 and spent $120,887.90 leaving a campaign debt of $11,640.49. While debt is something many campaigns face, the money has somehow to be accounted for, since she started her 2006 campaign with neither asset nor liability. Was there a loan from the candidate, her family, a private or a public institution to cover these debts? If so where is the form L? Which debts were not paid? Was additional money donated to the campaign from herself? Was some of the money contributed in late 2005 (but reported in 2006) actually destined for the 2004 campaign? If that is the case were those who donated "maxed out" in their 2004 general election contributions yet unknowingly donated more to her 2004 general election campaign when they thought they were contributing to her 2006 campaign (the Tacoma Longshoremen Credit Union, for example)?

In all the above we have a material breach of PDC reporting rules and perhaps in the case of item 2, a breach that goes to the heart of the law passed by the voters. I do not expect there is personal gain in this case, nor is this in any way related to Representative Green's current rough patch in changing treasurers and a new treasurer who is less familiar with PDC reporting. Those happen in every campaign and are benign. My problem is that Tami has evinced a level of neglect that is a slap in the face of the voters in her district and the citizens of Washington.

Sincerely,
